UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund, brings help and hope to millions of needy children and mothers through over 500 long-range programs in more than 100 countries.

In this era of technical and scientific progress, most of the world's children know disease, hunger, poverty and ignorance as constant companions. For them, proper nutrition and adequate medical care are goals for the future.

In its fight against such misery, UNICEF needs the wholehearted support of all nations, groups and individuals. UNICEF relies entirely on voluntary contributions. Its strength resides in mankind's love for its children, and in mankind's concern for their needs.
